Linda and I just wanted to say thank you to John and u building pro all the assistance in building your house. The building department people said were impressed with your supporting us on our house. We had our house warming last week and our kids and everyone just loved the house.

Everytime I come up the hill and see the roof line from the street I get chills knowing that we built this one ourselves. At first, neighbors were looking and gossiping about us doing our own house, but I guess that's just how people are when they don't know what you are doing. A year ago, I would have thought that it was too much to do but after we got our occupany permit I knew we had done it. There were somethings that we could have done different, but overall your support helped us get the house we wanted. We did also get a large house than we would have got with a regular builder.

It's funny to know where all of the dings and holes are. There is about six inch hole in the subfloor in the living room area that I saw for weeks. It kept bothering me. I know it's still there, but no one but Linda and I really know. After the patch was made and the carpet was laid, you can't even tell. It's that sort of thing that makes me smile and know that regular building companies do the same thing everyday and never tell the home owner.

You ought to give John a bonus or something because we must have worried him to death first out. He was just as patient and listened to all my concerns. That's all I wanted to write. One thing is for sure we got a lot more house that we could have afford to using a regular builder out of the phone book.

Sincerely,
